

Grassroots Focus on Kyleen Wright

November, 2006

November's SD10 activist wanted always above all things to be a mother. After her marriage and when she wasn't immediately blessed with children, she spiritually adopted the motherless unborn babies vulnerable to abortion. Six years later, God did bless her with children—four sons as a matter of fact—and she continues to serve faithfully on behalf of teens and babies at risk for abortion. In fact, she has been fighting for them since she first learned about abortion as a freshman in high school.

She was the president of Arlington Right to Life for many years, before serving as vice president and now President of Texans for Life Coalition.

In that capacity, she has spoken to groups and rallies all over the state, counseled abortion-minded women, taught in churches and schools, and testified before the State Legislature and the State Board of Education. Her columns and interviews have been published in newspapers and magazines across the state and country.

Kyleen recently helped start the Southeast Republican Club, which meets in Mansfield. There she serves as the Vice President of Programs, where she is working with others to energize and organize the area's many Republicans.

She is a Republican precinct chairman, having resumed this duty now that her children are older, and is busy profiling and organizing her precinct. She has also served as an election clerk and a poll watcher, as well as a delegate to many District, State & National Republican Conventions.

Her interest in politics dates back to her pre-teen years, starting with a visit to see President Nixon and her father's election to the school board where he served with Talmadge Heflin.

She has worked countless phone banks to identify pro-life and Republican voters and assist candidates, and she has walked many miles over her lifetime delivering campaign literature.

In addition, Kyleen is active in her Mansfield church where she has been a member for the past 10 years. Despite her busy lifestyle, it is still God & family first for Kyleen.
